Worked Puzzle Problem.

August June Bauman, son of John Bauman and wife, who is a student at Excelsior school, holds the distinction of being the first pupil of the Audrain rural schools to correctly work a puzzle example that was recently given out by County Superintendent Offutt. Mr. Offutt had visited all the county schools except two and the example was presented to the scholars at each place and the pupils were stumped until Excelsior school was reached. Young Bauman had the answer in a short time and he then showed his classmates how to work the example.—Centralia Guard.

Best Because Purest

There are two ways of producing salt. Ordinary white salt is produced from wells, by evaporation. Water is pumped down into the salt vein, where it dissolves the salt, after which it is pumped up again and evaporated. Any minerals or other impurities in the water used, remain in the salt. All soluble impurities in the salt vein itself are brought up with the brine, and cannot be eliminated by evaporation.

Western Rock Salt is mined. We obtain the salt in its original purity and strength, just as nature formed it. We are able to select the purest salt at all times, leaving any shale or other impurities in the mine. So you can see that evaporated salt, though it may be whiter, cannot compare in purity and strength with Western Rock Salt.

Western Rock-Salt-Blox are made of clean, finely crushed rock salt, pressed into 50 lb. blocks under tremendous pressure. They are gray—the natural color of pure salt. No white blocks will resist rain or snow like Western Blox—nor stand so much handling—nor last so long.
